Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia, is a reconstructed 18th-century town that acts as a living museum of colonial life. Although Colonial Williamsburg is one of the major draws in this area, there are also other attractions in and around the town, including a number of water parks. Water parks draw visitors who want to beat the summer heat with slides, pools and other water activities.

Water Country USA

Water Country USA is a 1950s/1960s-themed water park with more than 30 water rides and other forms of entertainment, including performances by actors. Although picnic tables are provided within the park, food may not be brought in. There are restaurants, however, where guests may eat. Swimsuits, shorts, aqua socks or T-shirts are allowed on rides within the park. Swim diapers can be purchased within the park, and a number of attractions are designed for young children. Season pass and daily ticket prices can be found on the company's website. Water Country USA 176 Water Country Pkwy. Williamsburg, VA 23185 800-343-7946 watercountryusa.com

Great Wolf Lodge

Great Wolf Lodge is an indoor/outdoor water park. Its attractions include giant slides, a variety of pools and a water fort. Great Wolf Lodge caters to the entire family, with entertainment for everyone from toddlers to adults. Great Wolf Lodge is a hotel, and guests at the water park must stay in the hotel. Room prices vary depending on season and occupancy. Check the company's website for full room details. Reservations should be made in advance, and potential guests can search for available rooms on the company's website.
